

PROFESSOR MICHELLE LINCOLN

Professor Michelle Lincoln is the Deputy Dean, Strategy in the Faculty of Health Sciences, The University of Sydney. Michelle is a speech pathologist and a Fellow of Speech Pathology Australia. In her role as Deputy Dean Michelle works across the allied health professions of diagnostic radiography, exercise and sports science, occupational therapy, physiotherapy and speech pathology. Her role includes student recruitment and university experience, curriculum development, external partnerships and leadership development. Michelle has won National and University teaching awards for her work in competency based assessment of speech pathology students.

Michelle's current research focusses on allied health service delivery models and workforce development in rural and remote communities. Her research is funded by the Australian Research Council and the National Health and Medical Research Council. Michelle partners with Aboriginal Medical Services, the Poche Centre for Indigenous Health and Aboriginal communities to enable community led research projects. Michelle has published more than 130 peer reviewed journal papers and regularly reviews papers and grants.

Michelle has formerly held the position of Associate Dean Learning and Teaching and Head of Discipline of Speech Pathology at the University of Sydney. She is a previous accreditor of Speech Pathology programs on behalf of Speech Pathology Australia.